Come unto the Lord

(Matthews 11:28)

Coming unto the Lord is key for maintaining a life of balance and peace within the hustle and bustle of theworkplace. Lord Jesus' invitation to us says: "Come to me, all of you who are weary and burdened, and I will give you rest." Coming to the Lord goes beyond the moment when the power of faith flows from Him to Christians like ourselves. It extends to an indispensable process that leads us to stride forth towards leading a balanced life, even going beyond our pleas to seek His help when we nd ourselves in treacherous waters. More importantly, it is about Him showing us in Person the way to persevere in our continuous search for His Wisdom and Guidance along our workaday world of timecards and performance reviews

"Coming to the Lord" is about an experience in our inner being. It is inevitable for us to find ourselves under pressures, anxiety and worries of every shade and shape along our journey of life. Once we have the Lord alongside us, we are certain that He is there as our Guide and Protector and present along every step of the way.It is such faith that empowers us to face every battle with absolute peace of mind! We know that we are not fighting the battle alone but enjoy the privilege to lean on the most powerful Suppo – Immanuel, God with us! Furthermore, coming to the Lord brings with it a huge dose of wisdom, too. This is most critical when it comes to decision making -- which can be tricky, thorny and comes with high stakes!

What a difference access to our Heavenly Father makes! Henceforth, we can enjoy spiritual wisdom that results in decisions more judicial and compliant with His Will. Coming unto the Lord is more than just an expression of faith amidst the busyness at the workplace; it is indeed the very spring well from which our strength surges forth. It provides the means for our hearts and minds to move on with peace instead of being drowned out by the conflicting and confusing cacophony around us. That is something vital for us to have, if we aim to live a meaningful life throughout our sojourn on this planet!

At GR, we have provided for programmes that covers workplace issues, and for you to discover how "The Big Three" -- working, living and ministering -- can find a balance of utmost beauty amongst themselves. We welcome and encourage every one reading this to listen or watch the program by way of new media or even pick up its e-book cousin for browsing in your leisure hours. In between, you will come across new ways to think aboutand be inspired by what used to be branded as the "daily grind." There would be greater harmony as you go about your work, life and ministry where you can find true balance and peace of mind in your walk with the Lord coming alongside!
