Shepherd's Corner

Yet It Did Not Fall

(Matthews 7:24-27)

Dr Billy Graham once said, "I believe one of the next great moves of God will happen through the believers in the workplace."

We, too, are of the strong belief that workplace practice would be one of the core ministries for our churches to take on in time to come, even as a main stage for the Kingship of Christ to unfold. While it is an undeniable fact that work is a responsibility that takes up a huge chunk of our waking hours, the venue where this takes place is also a major battleground for the wrestling contest between Kingdom values vs worldly ones, as well as amidst conflicting mindsets.

We are familiar with the nine blessings mentioned in 5:1-11 at the start of the three chapters 5~7 in Matthews where the meat of the Heavenly values is highlighted, and complete with the two outcomes presented in 7: 24-27. Compliance with the Will of our Heavenly Father is akin to a decision by the wise to construct his house upon a rock. Such a decision would leave him in no fear over a major disaster when workplace pressures, competition, pay-cuts or economic downturns threaten to bring the 'house' down -- a sharp contrast against those with worldly mindsets yelling mindless slogans daily, only to be turned away by our Lord.

Readers who wish to know more on these nine blessings vis-à-vis Being-Doing-Having transformation are welcomed to follow our serial programme broadcasts on "workplace coaching".

Musings of the Workplace [Thoughts after Reading]

The impression of these chapters being brief and succinct soon gives way to the worthy contents as one chews them over. Such is the case for one who dives into the suggested measures to counter critical issues that may crop up with workplace issues, as he finds every word to be of true substance and useful tips after all. Aren't these considerations collated from the three perspectives of values, character and capabilities? The eternal Truth gracing its pages, together with the profound wisdom and the need to reflect on every move – all of these call for humility, diligence and perseverance for the tree to bear fruit!

Great Tips from Workplace Coaches

A workplace coach plays the role of awakening the self-awareness and sharpening the thinking skills of his coachee at work. Instead of being hand-held along, the latter is led through a series of questions designed to explore issues from multiple angles and work them into his own actions to bring about changes to arrive at a holistic solution.

This programme has led me to wonder if my manner of working is displaying the glory of His children, as should be the case. May the Holy Spirit show the way, so that none of us would be led astray by all that merry-making, self-consolation and trailing further and further away from His Presence in our worldly thinking that is bogged down by excessive indulgences from our own past.
